Radiator Service Provider Specific License Terms for Radiator SIM Pack

These Specific License Terms apply to, and form part of, the Radiator Standard End User License Agreement (“License Agreement”).

Section 2 “License Grant” of the License Agreement is amended to read as follows:

License Grant

Subject to the Licensee’s payment of the license fee payable for the license to use the Software, the Licensee is granted a non-exclusive and non-transferable right to use the Software internally to provide the Licensee’s direct customers with a service allowing the customers to benefit, in the customers’ own internal operations, from the designed end user functionalities of the Software (“Software Service”). The Software is provided to the Licensee only in electronic form for download. Unless otherwise consented to by the Licensor, each Software version or Update (as the case may be) licensed to the Licensee will be made available to the Licensee only once.

The Licensee may install and use the Software on unlimited number of computers owned by or leased to the Licensee and operated by the Licensee, whether those computers are physical or virtual.

The Licensee may install and use Radar monitoring software on unlimited number of computers owned by or leased to the Licensee and operated by the Licensee, whether the computer(s) are physical or virtual.

The Licensee may install and use RAdmin management software on unlimited number of computers owned by or leased to the Licensee and operated by the Licensee, whether the computer(s) are physical or virtual.

Unless terminated in accordance with Section 8 of the License Agreement, the license granted herein is perpetual.

The Licensee’s right to use the Software can be limited also by pricing terms, which can for example set certain limits to capacity, number of transactions, other means of use or volumes.

The Licensee may make one (1) back-up copy of the Software solely for back-up purposes, provided that the Licensee affixes to such copies all copyright and proprietary notices that appear on the original copy.

The Licensee may use the Documentation internally in order to support the above-mentioned licensed use of the Software.

Without limiting the restrictions on license in the Section 3 of the License Agreement: (i) the Licensee is not allowed to grant its customers any rights to sublicense the Software or the Software Service, (ii) except for the right to receive the Software Service, the Licensee is not allowed to grant its customers any other rights to use the Software or the Software Service and (iii) the Licensee is not allowed to allow the customers to install the Software on the customers' equipment. The customers may not for example use the Software or the Software Service to provide services to third parties. The Licensee shall agree on the limitations herein with its customers and the Licensee is liable for the actions of its customers.

The requirement to pay a license fee might not apply to an evaluation license of the Software granted to the Licensee, if the Licensor consents in writing that the evaluation license is free of charge. Unless otherwise agreed to in writing by the Licensor, evaluation licenses expire after thirty (30) calendar days from the date the Software was downloaded by the Licensee or provided to the Licensee, whichever of these is the earliest. On the expiry of the evaluation license, the Licensee agrees to either purchase a Software license at the Licensor's list price in force at that time or to destroy all copies of the Software and Documentation in the Licensee's possession, including any copies on back-up tapes or other media.

In other respects, the terms and conditions of the License Agreement remain unchanged.
